Chapter 1 by Lindsey Coe

"Felicia, we're leaving!" Mother shouted up the staircase. I grabbed my suitcase and my makeup bag and ran down the stairs.

"That's all you're bringing? Jacob said sarcastically while glancing at my filled suitcase.

"Yes, we're staying at grandma and grandpa's house for two weeks, I want to be prepared." I explained to him. Jacob's eleven and doesn't understand the concept of how long half a month is. I put my suitcase in the car and set my makeup bag on top of it. I got in the front seat and put my buckle on.

"Are you guys ready?" Mom asked a little too excited.

"Mom, it's only two hours. That's barely a road trip." Jacob groaned.

"I think it sounds fun." I shot back at Jacob.

"I'm not excited about the road trip. I'm excited about going on cruise." Mom explained. Her and dad are going on a cruise for their tenth anniversary. Jacob complained about not going to the Bahamas, but I didn't. I didn't want to see my parents acting like two love doves. That's an image I don't want in my head.

"Plus their house is like a million years old. It's awesome!" I said almost too loud. Jacob groaned more while I turned up the radio.

Finally we arrived at their house. I couldn't believe the house I was looking at. It was giant! They even had horses.
